

Dan Stumpf, originally from Buffalo, NY, has called Nashville home for the last 11 years. Homebuilding has always been a passion for Dan, leading him to his current role as Division President for Goodall Homes of South Nashville.

He has been in the homebuilding business for over 20 years, gaining an extensive knowledge of the housing market, costs of materials, and the craftsmanship that goes into building a forever home.

Joining the Habitat for Humanity Williamson-Maury (HFHWM) Board of Director's felt like a natural extension to his work of bringing the joy of home to local families.

Seeing the firsthand struggles of the housing industry, Dan reflects on the ever-present challenges that HFHWM faces, "There is no shortage of need, so in my mind the two biggest obstacles facing HFHWM appears to be the perception by some municipalities or communities that a Habitat community is something they would not like to see in their area. When in reality people who go through the Habitat program are some of the most deserving, knowledgeable, and hardworking people that those communities may ever see."

Dan not only has a heart for serving the community, but the initiative to take action. Alongside his work with HFHWM over the past five years, he has been involved with Graceworks. "Habitat's Mission centers around putting God's love into action, what I strive to do in life is to use the skills and talents God has given to me to help others, so our missions are perfectly aligned."
